

Sutra Writing

Instructions: The Buddhist Canon is considered by some scholars to be open and over a thousand unknown people have written sutras, which are now regarded as sacred texts. This makes sense in light of the understanding that everyone is Buddha nature. This sutra writing exercise sets up a dialogue between you and the Buddha within. The dialogue may go for as many rounds as you wish. Please write by hand.

The Sutra

Thus have I heard. Once the Buddha was on Vulture Peak surrounded by those immersed in the affairs of the world. I rose from my seat and addressed the Buddha: “World-Honored One, our concerns are many, but wisdom is hard to find. I face a situation difficult to resolve. What shall I do?”

The Buddha said: “Tell me your predicament.”

I said:

The Buddha said:

I said:

The Buddha said:

I said:

The Buddha said:

I said:

The Buddha said:

I said:

The Buddha said:

I said:

The Buddha said:

I said:

Everyone present was filled with peace and they bowed to the Buddha's wisdom.
